Teaching English for Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) Conference

What is the TESOL Conference?

Teaching English for Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) funds attendance to the annual TESOL conference to provide the latest information on English teaching techniques, and opportunities to present research and network with colleagues. Through the conference, teachers and scholars can discover and implement ideas from the cutting edge of English language pedagogy.

Who can apply?

The Teaching English for Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) Conference occurs at a variable time each year. The U.S. Embassy chooses to nominate possible conference-goers once these dates have been set. This variability means that there is no set application or application deadline year-to-year. Nonetheless, applicants should have strong academic and/or professional credentials as a English language teacher or as a TESOL graduate student. Applicants should also show a strong willingness to learn and to implement new ideas in their own classrooms.

How to apply?

Once the dates have been set, one should be able to find the application to the TESOL Conference on the US Embassy Algiers Website
